Follow the Winsor Trail. When you reach a fence with a gate marking the entrance to the Pecos Wilderness, take the fork going up to your right (east) rather than continue straight ahead. This begins the steepest section of the hike along the Raven's Ridge trail in dense forest. The Raven's Ridge trail will take you above tree line and you'll soon top out on Deception Peak at 12,320ft. From here, continue to the north along the South Ridge of Lake Peak along a rocky ridge. The route is not very technical but there is decent exposure and a few sections requiring third class moves. You'll reach the summit of Lake Peak after about a quarter mile from the start of the ridge.
Sandia Peak:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>● 10,678'</li> <li>● 7 miles (one way)</li> <li>● La Luz trailhead</li> <li>● $3 per car</li> <li>● Located east of Albuquerque</li> </ul>	To access the bottom trailhead for the La Luz trail, Take I-25 North. Near the outskirts of town, Tramway Boulevard intersects I-25. Turn right on Tramway and follow it as it heads toward the Sandias. As the road nears the mountain, it begins to veer right (South). Before the road actually turns south, look for the Juan Tabo cut off on your left. Turn left on this road and proceed north for a mile or two until you see a road to your right leading to the Juan Tabo Picnic Area, which is marked by a sign. Follow this road to your right for several hundred yards to reach the parking lot for the Picnic Area. Here you will have to pay $3 per vehicle to park. The trailhead for the La Luz is located on the edge of the parking lot and is quite easy to find. The trail is usually fairly busy.

After about a mile, the road crosses the north fork of Tesuque Creek. From this point, the road makes a series of climbs for about a mile. In another mile the road has climbed to about 11,000 feet in elevation. The road comes to a steep, sharp left turn after which it levels out somewhat. The final stretch to Santa Fe Ski Area and the Tesuque Peak Electronic Site is out in the open and is often quite windy. Just after you pass under the chairlift, you can turn left onto the Skyline Trail 251 to the summit of Lake Peak and beyond, if you wish, or continue on the road to the summit of Tesuque Peak.

Hermit Peak:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>● 10,212'</li> <li>● 4 miles (one way)</li> <li>● Pecos Wilderness/Santa Fe National Forest</li> <li>● Hermit Peak Trailhead #223</li> </ul>	Hermit Peak is located in northern New Mexico about 20 miles northwest of Las Vegas. From Interstate 25, exit at Las Vegas, highway 65. From Las Vegas, take New Mexico highway 65 west for about 14 miles, passing the little towns of Gallinas and El Porvenir. At about 14 miles the road forks. Right is Hwy 65 (FR 261). Turn right on FR 261 at the signed fork and head to El Porvenir Campground. The campground is about 3 miles past the fork. It is a paved road all the way to the parking lot. The trailhead is across the bridge into the campground. The Hermit Peak Trail is #223 and has a large sign at the beginning. Use trail #223 to Hermit Peak. The trailhead is at 7500 feet. At about 1/4 mile, there is a signed fork in the trail where you go left. In about a half mile two roads come into view. Stay left for about 100 yards. There is a sign directing you to the right, away from the road. The next mile and a half gradually get steeper culminating into interminable switchbacks up the canyon wall. At 3.5 miles, the switchbacks end with a fantastic view to the left. The trail makes a turn to the right and climbs about 50 yds to Hermit Spring. Good water is available at Hermit Spring. At the spring, the trail forks and makes a loop around the entire summit plateau. Take either fork. The right fork is the shortest, but steepest to the summit. The left is a little longer, but easier. If you take the left fork, the trail forks again after a short distance; stay right. The hermit cave is on the right fork on the southeastern edge of the summit.
